If you're thinking about signing your kids up for summer camp, now is the time to start looking. Camps are filling up quickly.

Why sign your kids up for camp?

- 1. Being around other kids is important. Spending time with peers helps build communication skills and confidence.
- 2. Opportunity to face new challenges: Physical, mental, and social challenges will help your child learn and grow.
- 3. Camp makes learning and physical activity fun. Learning to love these activities can have life-long positive effects on your child's health.

Where to look? Local non-profits, city rec centers, religious organizations, and nearby schools are a great place to start. Check with classmate parents, coworkers, and neighbors to find out if their kids are going to camps.
